

Matthew Carlson
Sociology

Oregon Health Research and Evaluation Collaborative

The Oregon Health Research and Evaluation Collaborative is made up of health services researchers and students from Oregon universities and state and county agencies as well as the broader community. It was formed by Portland State University, the State Office for Health Policy and Research, Oregon Health Sciences University, and Providence's Center for Outcomes Research and Education to address the need for high-quality, nonpartisan analysis of the effects of Medicaid policy changes on low-income adults.