

Jazmin Ogle
John Rueter
Green Empowerment

The partnership between Portland State University and Green Empowerment encourages students to develop international perspectives in service learning and to build the skills necessary to work within the fields of international community development, renewable energy, social entrepreneurship, sustainability and service learning. Portland State University students contribute to this partnership by designing innovative projects and creating opportunities to further Green Empowerment's objectives to provide renewable energy systems, improve food security and create sustainable resource management.

Solar drip irrigation system project team in Bramadero, Nicaragua.